2-2.5/5. I have seen "Formations of the Secular: Christianity, Islam, and Modernity" referenced to all over and there is certainly much to ruminate on in this recondite read, but I would have preferred a clearer and more accessible explanation (I found Talal Asad's argument quite convoluted and challenging to follow).

Of these two types, the secular believer, as with "secular Christianity" (which, by the way, is contradictory and, therefore, a misnomer) is more subtle because they are sugar-coated with spirituality and outward peace but have foundations of secular values. The following are 10 signs you are a secular believer: 1.

Secular, Secularism, Secularization. BIBLIOGRAPHY. The term secular arises from the history of Christianity and describes that which is not sacred or not of the church. The term secularization thus refers to the process by which human activity and knowledge progressively come under the control of scientific rather than religious understanding. Max Weber (1864 – 1920) termed this ...

Today's lukewarm, secular Christian is what most people identify as a Christian. But in reality, the secular Christian is a Christian made according to the image of those Renaissance- and Enlightenment-era creators of the "new, civilized, polite order". He conforms to their structural determiners of Christian life, but nothing more.

The secular spirit has even infiltrated your "church." Wolves have overtaken the Body of Christ and secularized it. They've made it part of the world through State incorporation. If you think you are a Christian and your church is incorporated under the State, you're a "Secular Christian." That's an oxymoron.

The common designations of "secular" and "sacred" are overused. A Christian artist will create art to the glory of God: there is nothing overtly "sacred" about a still-life of a bowl of pears, but there's nothing "secular" about it, either. A Christian musician will create music to the glory of God.

Solar System Formation. Secular models of solar system formation have also come up short. The earth, moon, sun, and all the planets have supposedly formed from a collapsing nebula—a cloud of hydrogen and helium gas. The model is upheld by secular astronomers because it can account for some of the properties of the solar system.

The Reformation movement within Germany diversified almost immediately, and other reform impulses arose independently of Luther. Huldrych Zwingli built a Christian theocracy in Zürich in which church and state joined for the service of God. Zwingli agreed with Luther in the centrality of the doctrine of justification by faith, but he espoused a different understanding of the Holy Communion.

Living Christian in a Secular World | Living On Tilt

Many Christians are convinced that scientific data demand millions of years for Earth's history and are therefore dissuaded from believing the Bible's doctrine of a recent creation. Yet a belief in millions of years actually prevents secular scientists from finding solutions for many mysteries of Earth history—solutions that can be found in the pages of God's Word. For instance, the ...
