The authorship of the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, collectively known as Luke-Acts, is an important issue for biblical exegetes who are attempting to produce critical scholarship on the origins of the New Testament. Traditionally, the text is believed to have been written by Luke the companion of Paul. However, the earliest manuscripts are anonymous, and the traditional view has been challenged by many modern scholars.

Luke, who allegedly wrote a gospel and the Acts of the Apostles, has more to say about the Spirit than any other biblical writer does. He portrays the Spirit as the activity and presence of God but also as an impersonal force or power (Luke 5:17, Luke 8:46), and, for example, as "the Spirit of Jesus" ( ). In turn, for Luke, Jesus was a man primarily of the Spirit.
