The price of each Companion Book was 50 cents (undercutting the Modern Library by a dime or two). By 1919, the price of a Companion Book was raised to 1 dollar, and the design of the book changed: the floppy "bookcraft leather" binding changed to a stiffer, cheaper (but still fake leather) material, and the colored endpapers were replaced with plain paper (see below). The paper used for the book was coarser and cheaper.
