Understanding the Solution Sales Process

"Solution Selling is an excellent vehicle to teach new salespeople critical sales skills and allow experienced salespeople to fine tune their skills.

Solution Selling is the best methodology I've seen for placing emphasis on business issues rather than product."

Forget Your Product: Start Selling 'Solutions' Instead

The problem resolution is what constitutes a "solution". Solution selling is usually used in sales situations where products are just one of the elements that lead to a solution. Often the real solution develops after the sales process—as with software or large plant engineering and construction projects. It is typical for solution selling situations that the buyer only rarely purchases such a solution and instead needs the knowledge of the solution partner.

Mike Bosworth is probably the smartest guy I ever met in the sales training world. His first book, Solution Selling: Creating Buyers in Difficult Selling Markets, was brilliant, and full of great advice. I highly recommend it. That being said, I observe that very few companies actually follow the system that Mike lays out in that book.

The End of Solution Sales - Harvard Business Review

This kind of selling requires understanding the “three levels of buyer need.” First, buyers experience “latent pain” from business problems they cannot solve or even admit. Second-level buyers feel “pain” they can recognize and acknowledge. They want a solution. Buyers on the third level have developed “vision” and see solutions.

The Problem with Solution Sales. What this means for the solution sales professional is that their customers are already aware of the problem, the solution and the options. So unless you market a very unique solution, relying on the traditional solution sales approach will create a very hard to overcome challenge in your sales career.
