In my article (Capps in Pastoral Psychology, 2013a) I focused on the professional and personal reasons for Erik H. Erikson's decision to write a book on Martin Luther (Erikson 1958) and his rationale for emphasizing Luther's resourcefulness in emancipating himself from outworn religious beliefs and practices. I also discussed the fact that ...

Young Man Luther by Erikson, Erik H - Biblio.com

Erikson is famous for another reason. Although Freud had written a celebrated study of Leonardo da Vinci, it was Erikson's books on Gandhi and Martin Luther that established a new genre, 'psychobiography', or the application of psychological analysis to famous people's lives. In Luther he found an example of identity crisis par excellence.

Book Write-Up: Young Man Luther, by ... - James' Ramblings

'This study of Martin Luther as a young man was planned as a chapter in a book on emotional crises in late adolescence and early adulthood. But Luther proved too bulky a man to be merely a chapter. His young manhood is one of the most radical on record: whatever he became part of, whatever became part of him, was eventually destroyed or rejuvenated.'

Erik Erikson - Young Man Luther - Tom Butler-Bowdon

Description : Like Leonard Smith's larger study, Religion and the Rise of History, this essay, Martin Luther's Two Ways of Viewing Life, asserts that Luther's well-known at-the-same-time, simul, or paradoxical way of viewing life does not capture Luther's thought as a whole, because it does not represent his deeply incarnational and dynamic, mystical and holistic, particularizing and historical way of viewing life based on the power of the Word and the Spirit of God either in his own life or ...
